This is an amazing piece of historical research about the early settlement of San Patricio and Bee Counties, Texas, and the adjoining counties that were involved in the original Mexican land grants to Irish Impresarios in pre-revolution Texas. For those interested in the genealogy of the McGloin, O'Docharty, O'Neill, and other early families, it is a treasure trove of information gleaned from personal interviews, newspaper clippings, and other original sources. For the history buff, you get a feel for what it was like to land on the undeveloped Texas coast, and a somewhat different view of the Texas revolution. The Mexican grants were very generous, and many of these early settlers remained loyal to the Mexican government at the outset of the revolution. Texans have longstanding ties to Mexico, our neighbor, and it is regrettable that our relations are now colored by misguided and slanderous rhetoric. This book won the Summerfield G. Roberts Award for Texas History, presented by the Sons of the Republic of Texas. It is an important work, and deserves a re-print.

This book was a disappointment to me. Was hoping to find out more about my ancestors who were original settlers to this town. My Great-Great Grandmother and Great-Grandfather were only mentioned in 2 places. One mention was of the cemetery where my Great-Grandfather is buried..

(Already have pictures of the headstones in the Gussettville cemetery. The other mention is of my great-great-grandmother as having receiving a land grant (already have a copy of land grant). I truly thought that since she was the only woman of the 12 who received these original grants that there would be more about her in this book. Big disappointment. Might be useful to others but not ne. Sorry I wasted the $50 on this.
