This is another edition of a wonderful book for kids. We have been buying them every year for awhile now because the kids love curling up with the almanac and flipping through the beautiful pages. I am a book lover myself. And I am always willing to put anything on a shelf that encourages reading and imagination or discovery. The kids love finding fun facts and presenting them to us. It's fun for them to know something mom and dad didn't know. :-)

This was a gift for my daughter, and within hours she was quoting things from the book and discussing all the different things she have learned. The cute animal section of course has a special mention on its own. The quality of the book is very good, everything you can expect from National Geographic is there: interesting facts, discussion on issues kids crave about, biology, science, math, social studies, etc. This is a very good way to encourage kids to learn without having to go through a formal textbook. And construction is sturdy enough to withstand the treatment from a typical kid. Highly recommended, cannot go wrong with it

My eight year old loves these Nat Geo books. He's fascinated by all the information in here and loves sharing what he learns with the rest of the family. Perfect for his reading level which is a above average for his second grade. Everything is age appropriate.

My son loves this Almanac. We first bought one in 2014 and he was hooked. The pictures are amazing and the book is full of facts he likes quizzing us on. Reading definitely is not a passion for him, but he can spend hours with this book.

All of these National Geographic books are excellent. I have a few boys who do not enjoy reading full length books, but they love to read interesting facts. This type of book is perfect for them, because it gets them to read, and it helps them learn things at the same time. My kids love these!

I began buying Almanacs for my now 38 year old son the Christmas he was 6( no internet times) and it has become an "expected" gift this many years later. This year I have begun this tradition with my oldest grandson who just turned 7. :) As a retired teacher, I still believe it is a great learning tool and of course a long standing tradition in our family!

My 10 year old niece asked for this for her birthday, so I got it for her. She started looking through it immediately after she opened it, and kept reciting interesting information to us as she skimmed through it. Worth the reasonable price, and it made me so happy that there are kids that are still interested in reading the old-fashioned way - with a book in their hands!

Purchased this for my niece. She reads all these almanacs cover to cover, over and over again. These are great ideas for christmas or birthdays - hours of fun for the kids in your life.
