Marketing lost one of its pioneers when E. Jerome "Jerry" McCarthy passed away at his home in East Lansing, Michigan in 2015. After earning a Ph.D. at the University of Minnesota, McCarthy joined the faculty at Notre Dame and became a Fellow in the prestigious Ford Foundation Program at Harvard, an experience that focused on how to make marketing management practice more rigorous and shaped his thoughts on the needs of students and educators. Jerry spent most of his career at Michigan State University, gaining a reputation for working with passion and purpose. Jerry received the AMA's Trailblazer Award in 1987 and was voted one of the "top five" leaders in marketing thought by marketing educators. Jerry was well known for his innovative teaching materials and texts, including Basic Marketing and Essentials of Marketing. These books changed the way marketing was taught by taking a managerial point of view. He also introduced a marketing strategy planning framework, organizing marketing decisions around the "4Ps" - product, place, promotion, and price. As these approaches became the standard in other texts, McCarthy continued to innovate, including new materials in the digital realm. Today's marketing instructors owe a great debt to this innovative pioneer.

Came as a looseleaf. Pages completely mixed up. I had to go through each page to put it in order and place it in a 3 ring binder. Not what was expected

I ordered this for my daughter, taking a college course and needed this book , a little too expensive but she really needed it.

Does the book (new) come with connect code?
