DOWNLOAD FOR FREE ON KINDLE UNLIMITED At the Duke of Frampton's annual masquerade ball, Sarah Curtis is excited by the prospect of finding romance. Her father believes that the duke will propose to Sarah's older sister, Catherine before the end of the season. The hopes of the family are threatened when Sarah fails to recognise the duke in his disguise, and thus reveals more about her sister's character than is acceptable. Meanwhile, John Martin, Sarah's friend from childhood, finds his fondness for Sarah increasing. Sarah is becoming aware of this change in their relationship but finds herself unable to return his affections. Nevertheless, once her parents discover his intentions they begin to put more pressure on Sarah to consider Mr Martin as a potential husband. However, Sarah has a secret of her own - she has been having clandestine liaisons with a masked admirer who, despite his disguise, stirs up deep desires within her very soul. As the duke's regard for Catherine diminishes, Sarah makes a desperate attempt to put things right but Catherine is the mistress of her own destruction.

Customer Reviews

I enjoyed this story even though I usually read spicier romances. Sarah recognizes that there is more to life, and love, than wealth. Her sister is her exact opposite, and when Sarah attempts to help her sister attract a duke, she puts a series of events in motion which no one could predict. The Duke's Masquerade is a fun, quick read. Although it is classified as a "sweet read", I recommend it for anyone who loves a good old-fashioned romance.

The story was ok but it wasn't developed enough and not knowing who was the masked player was a little hokey.

Good. Interesting. I enjoyed the book.

I loved this book from the start! The heroine is a strong minded woman and knows she wants to meet a man she can truly love. The handsome Duke wants to be loved for who he is, not what he has. True love can happen when you least expect it!

Sweet and enduring romance! He chooses the wrong sister....see where the path leads him. A mysterious adventure that you won't be able to put down.

Sarah is her sister's pawn in a plot to get her to marry the lowly John Martin, who is a dear friend of Sarah's, but she feels no romantic pull towards him. The Duke of Frampton throws a masquerade ball where everyone wears a mask, so everyone's identity is a mystery. Sarah's mystery man has beautiful green eyes and dark hair, just like John Martin, but acts nothing like John. He says he is a close friend of the Duke's. He gives her a handkerchief embroidered with a "W" on it, so the mystery just grows deeper. Will Sarah solve the mystery in time to prevent a marriage to the wrong man?

A surprising plot for this excellent tale of romance. A masquerade which conceals this host and allows him the chance to observe his female guests. Delightful.

A good read that kept my interest for the day. I am also glad I did not come from a rich background where you were expected to land a rich mate.
